The property

A 2019 house that avoided the mistakes of its generation: warm rather than white, planted rather than paved, and sited so that every principal room looks into the canyon instead of at the neighbours.

Double-height living opens onto a covered terrace and the pool; the kitchen is at the centre of the plan rather than pushed to the edge, with a scullery behind it. Five bedrooms, all en suite, and a lower level with a screening room, gym and wine storage.

The knoll gives the property genuine privacy — no house is visible from the pool deck — and the driveway is gated well below the motor court.
