The property

June Street is one of the four streets that made Hancock Park, and the 100 block is the one with the mature canopy. This 1924 Tudor has been in three families and has never been stripped.

Quarter-sawn oak panelling in the living room and library, leaded glass in the original frames, and a staircase that has not moved. The kitchen and the five bathrooms are new; nothing else pretends to be.

A quarter-acre lot with a walled rear garden, a detached garage and a basement that runs the footprint of the house.
